Same goes for the 'Settings/Information' bit that says Redmine 1.0.4 so far

- File footer-project-name.patch added

This patch replaces "Redmine" with "ChiliProject" and removes the copywrite.

I propose its best to put something like this up sooner than later while we wait on the copywrite decisions (#128) to be made

I'm going to do some reading up on US copyright law but I'll merge this until #128 is decided.

There's a few more places I'd suggest changing:

* @app/models/mailer.rb@ (Redmine test, X-Redmine-*, X-Mailer

* @app/views/mailer/test*@ (sent by)

* @config/settings.yml@ (default settings)

* @db/migrate/001_setup.rb@ (name of the admin user)

That's the diff for me, minus the migration because for some weird reason (line endings?) git thinks I've changed 9/10 of the file:

- Subject changed from Change the footer in the layout to say ChiliProject to Change public strings of Redmine to ChiliProject

Felix:

I have some of this code in SeeProjectRun I can extract. I think we should just focus on the public strings for now and change the internal ones later (class and module names)

All the ones I referenced but the mail headers are public-facing at one point or another ;-)

I found a bunch more public strings including some headers (mail, web, api). Can someone review my pull request to make sure I didn't miss anything or break anything?

Well, I had considered the "viewable" strings only, but those are OK too.

I had a look and didn't see anything strange or that I'd consider breaking, though you should probably correct the 2 "Chiliproject"s in that file https://github.com/chiliproject/chiliproject/pull/12/files#L14L0 to "ChiliProject" :-) I haven't searched if you've overlooked things either, but you have my go for that one, commit at will.

Ah, one more thing though: I'd be in favor of dropping the copyright notice in the footer completely, I think it's enough if it says "Powered by ChiliProject".

This is probably what we want to do until we get the copyright/legal stuff properly figured out anyways.

Thanks. The test fixtures and footer have been updated and merged into master. I also i18n'd the "Powered by" string in commit:fb89e7a842f162e5b1086a0a06a071069d9dc36a.
